METHOD AND APPARATUS FOR GENERATING A SOFTWARE DEVELOPMENT TOOL

Abstract

A method for generating a software development tool, including creating a definition file defining an action to be performed by the software development tool, creating a schema defining characteristics of a plurality of desired inputs for the software development tool, creating a resource file comprising information required by the software development tool at runtime, and generating the software development tool using the definition file, the schema, and the resource file.

23312_2.DOC